NO PLACE LIKE HOME:
wealth, community & the politics of homeownership
by Brian J. McCabe

Homeownership has long been the centerpiece of the American Dream. Since the early-twentieth century, proponents have promoted it as a tool for strengthening communities and building better citizens. In No Place Like Home: Wealth, Community and the Politics of Homeownership (Oxford University Press, 2016), Georgetown sociologist Brian J. McCabe investigates these long-standing claims about the civic benefits of homeownership.
